

Are you a planner or regeneration specialist?

An artist or public art agency?

The OXBRIDGE

HOMEZONE

CONFERENCE

Lowestoft
Suffolk

5th + 6th May 2004

An engineer or architect?

A community group thinking of developing a Home Zone

HOMEZONE

There are as many reasons for being interested in regeneration schemes as there are pebbles on the beach at Lowestoft.

And because there are so many reasons, there are just as many questions about what makes them work, who makes them work - even DO they work?

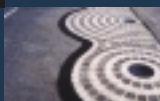

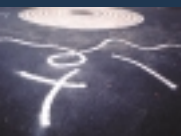

Speakers at the Oxbridge Home Zone Conference, 5th & 6th May 2004, will consider all these questions, from why such schemes are set up in the first place to how to get the most out of them in the long run.

And in every case, they will address the fundamental issue of how to motivate, engage and empower local communities - and reach the smaller, often marginalised groups that make up those communities.

On Day One, the conference will examine the benefits of working with artists, considering the specialist skills and talents they bring to regeneration schemes and asking how best to use those skills. Day Two of the conference includes a site visit to the Oxbridge Home Zone in Lowestoft, accompanied by the lead artist, Les Bicknell.

As the conference stretches over 2 days, there will be plenty of time for you to ask questions of your own - and possibly discover some answers you hadn't thought of - among the 150 delegates expected to attend.

You may even have time for a stroll on Lowestoft beach; but possibly not long enough to count the pebbles.
